Message from the Minister

I am pleased to present the 2009-10 Business Plan for the Department of Labour and Workforce Development, our second such plan since our inception in 2008.

In its first year, the department engaged in a strategic planning exercise that engaged more than 800 stakeholders, partners and staff. The result is a four-year strategic plan that focuses on achieving a vision of fairness, safety and prosperity for all Nova Scotians by living, learning and working to our highest potential.

Using the new strategic plan, the department has reorganized to streamline service delivery and strengthen our accountability to the citizens of Nova Scotia. A four-year plan for office space and leaseholds is being developed for our service locations.

Goals for this fiscal year include the implementation of the Canada-Nova Scotia Labour Market Development Agreement, which transitioned federal employment support programming and approximately 100 federal positions to the provincial government on July 1, 2009. We will continue to work with other provincial departments and community partners on new services and opportunities for unemployed and low-skilled workers delivered under the Canada-Nova Scotia Labour Market Agreement.

This year, we will implement the Fair Registration Practices Act, which requires a fair and transparent process for professional licensing and occupational certification in Nova Scotia. We will implement changes to the Agreement on Internal Trade, which will help attract workers to Nova Scotia. We will continue the minimum wage increases that support our most vulnerable workers. The department will partner with stakeholders to implement new Atlantic Lottery Regulations, the multi-year Occupational Health and Safety operational plan, the new Technical Safety Act and regulations, and review the recommendations of the Pension Review Panel. A project is also underway to modernize regulations and procedures for our boards and tribunals to better serve Nova Scotians.

The department is developing tools to provide labour market information to better assist employers and employees to prepare for key trends and demographic cycles that impact our labour market. These tools, along with high quality apprenticeship and adult learning opportunities, support the development of a skilled workforce for Nova Scotia. The department is also working to provide information on best practices for employers and employees as they prepare for a possible H1N1 pandemic. With the support of employers, educators, unions, industry and community groups; the Department of Labour and Workforce Development is confident that it can help strengthen the labour market and prepare for the new economy.

1. Vision and Mission

Vision

Fairness, safety and prosperity for all Nova Scotians by living, learning and working to our highest potential.

Mission

Labour and Workforce Development will create winning conditions by fostering the social and economic well-being of Nova Scotians by:

- protecting Nova Scotia's people and property;
- anticipating and responding to workforce needs;
- promoting safety at work, home and play;
- ensuring fairness at work;
- supporting life-long learning; and,
- building capacity to seize opportunities

Strategic Principles

The department considers the following strategic principles in its business planning. These principles were developed as a part of the department's four-year Strategic Plan and will guide how we will operate:

1. Partnerships: Develop and strengthen policies, processes, structures and relationships to achieve outcomes both internal and external to the department.
2. Shared ownership: Share responsibility among stakeholders.
3. Innovation: Foster innovation both within Labour and Workforce Development and among our partners.
4. Protection: Ensure that businesses/individuals comply with legislation, regulation and best practices.
5. Talent Development: Develop our people to create a vibrant, healthy workforce.

2. Planning Context- Environmental Scan

The department has a broad range of responsibilities and in order to properly address them we recognize that we do not act in a vacuum. The department must be aware of the larger environment, as a large part of our work is determined by workforce trends and changes. There are several factors that significantly affect the department's work:

Financial

Key financial indicators changed rapidly in Nova Scotia in 2008. Gas prices and the world price of oil stabilized. The Consumer Price Index slowed at the end of 2008 to -0.2 per cent, and Gross Domestic Product (GDP) was stable, with little growth expected in 2009. Mortgage interest rates lowered through the year, with variable rates as low as 3 per cent and closed rates around 5 per cent. Major changes have occurred in our manufacturing and forestry sectors, as a worldwide downturn impacted our economy. The shift continued from a resource to a knowledge and service-based economy. The Canadian dollar lowered to $0.78 compared to the US dollar.

Demographics

Nova Scotia's workforce is affected by changes in our population. The latest Statistics Canada quarterly estimates indicate that the provincial population was 939,125 as of October 2008. Our labour force has increased to 497,800 workers; however, our unemployment rate in January 2009 was at 8.8 per cent. The unemployment rate for the rest of Canada was 7.2 per cent. The unemployment rate varies throughout Nova Scotia, with Halifax having the lowest rate (seasonally adjusted) of 5.6 per cent; eastern Nova Scotia having a rate of 14.8 per cent and western Nova Scotia having a rate of 9.2 per cent. Almost 50 per cent of our workers, or 221,000 work in the Halifax Regional Municipality. This really directs where a great deal of our operational services, for example, occupational health and safety services, should be focused.

Nearly one in three Canadian employers has difficulty finding skilled workers. The economy, though in a downturn, still has areas where there is a skills shortage, for example, in the need for nurses and Continuing Care Assistants. Pressure on colleges and institutes to meet the needs of employers is intense. Approximately 42 per cent of the skills shortages in the country are in occupations that require college or apprenticeship training, compared with seven per cent in jobs requiring university education. The apprenticeship system experienced noted growth in 2007-2008: a 17 per cent increase in the number of new apprentice registrations and a 41 per cent increase in the number of youth apprentice registrations.

Employment growth has slowed, offsetting some of the positive impact of higher average wages per employee. By 2017, exits (retirements) from the labour force are expected to exceed entrants (young workers entering the workforce for the first time), suggesting the labour force will go into decline and economic growth will begin to slow.

Nova Scotia's population is continuing to age; we have the oldest population in Canada, with a median age of 41.8 years (2006 Census). Between 2001 and 2006, the population under age 25 in Nova Scotia declined 6.5 per cent and the population aged 65 and over increased by 9.2 per cent. Retirements from the workplace are anticipated to be very high in the next 4 years, with labour demand being higher than supply by 2017.

In contrast to the rest of the population, the Aboriginal population is much younger. In 2006 approximately 44 per cent of our First Nations people were under 25 years of age as compared to 29.3 per cent for the general population in 2006.

In the 2006 census, 37,680 individuals identified themselves as a visible minority, which is 4.2 per cent of our population. At approximately 51 per cent, the largest visible minority group is African Nova Scotians.

Our population has higher levels of disability than other provinces, with approximately 20 per cent of the population reporting some level of disability. The Province will be targeting employment training and support to the disabled under our agreements with the federal government.

Growth Areas

There have been population shifts within Nova Scotia. The trend towards increased urbanization has continued with the Halifax Regional Municipality having the strongest growth (8.7 per cent between 1996-2006). The counties within a 90-minute commute to downtown Halifax (Colchester, Kings, and Hants) have shown stable or slight population growth. Eleven counties have experienced declines in population ranging from 0.9 per cent in Lunenburg County, to 17.1 per cent in Guysborough County.

Wages

Given the current age of Nova Scotians, strong wage growth is likely over the next ten years as people tend to earn the most during their working life between the ages of 45 and 55. However, this trend will go into reverse after ten to twenty years as people retire and are replaced by younger employees paid at lower rates. Over the coming years, we will increasingly shift from receiving income from wages to receiving income from pensions and savings sources. Some provinces, such as Quebec, have moved to adopt phased retirement to allow more retired workers to continue working on a part time basis. In Nova Scotia, only 41.1 per cent of the population contributes to an employer sponsored pension plan. This means that more Nova Scotians will be relying solely on the Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security when they retire.

Nova Scotia has the highest minimum wage rate in the Maritime Provinces, at $8.60 per hour, effective April 1, 2009. The Province has put in place annual increases that will have minimum wage reach $9.65 per hour by Oct. 1, 2010. By 2010, minimum-wage employees working full-time would earn more than the low income cut off for a single person, a commonly used poverty indicator. Those sectors most impacted by the minimum wage are the retail, tourism, accommodation and food services sectors.

In Nova Scotia in 2008, the average annual weekly wages (including tips, commissions, and bonuses) were $674.58, compared to the Canadian average of $783.09.

Productivity

Labour productivity in Nova Scotia grew above the national average in 2006 at 1.4 per cent (vs. 1.0 per cent nationally); however, the Province's labour productivity remains 16.5 per cent below the national average and ranks third lowest in Canada. Nova Scotia has had a labour productivity issue for the last thirty years which may reflect an overemphasis on employment and not enough emphasis on capital investment and skills training.

At the same time, Nova Scotia has a very low level of work disruption due to strikes or lock-outs. The provincial rate of 0.015 per cent of time lost per year in Nova Scotia has compared well to the .02 per cent rate nationally, and this has been a consistent trend for the past decade.

Education

The number of Nova Scotians aged 25-64 with a post-secondary diploma, certificate or degree is near the national average (59.8 per cent vs. 60.3 per cent). According to Statistics Canada (2005/06), Nova Scotia's graduation rate was 82.3 per cent, fifth-highest in Canada and higher than the national average of 72.1 per cent. During the same period, the Province's graduation rate also grew faster than the national average.

For Nova Scotia, 82.2 per cent of people aged 25-64 with a university degree are employed, compared to 50.2 per cent of those with less than a high school diploma. The Nova Scotia Community College indicates that 91 per cent of its graduates are employed annually, most in jobs relating to their field of study.

In 2003, Nova Scotians (16 years and older) participated in the International Adult Literacy and Skills Survey that tested prose literacy, document literacy, numeracy and problem-solving. Thirty-eight per cent of Nova Scotians do not have the literacy levels necessary to participate fully in a knowledge-based economy.

3. Core Business Areas

In 2008-2009, the department developed its four-year Strategic Plan. The department has been restructured to effectively implement that plan and improve service delivery to Nova Scotians. The department operates along four core business areas:

1) Labour Services Branch:

The four divisions of the Labour Services Branch focus on resolving workplace disputes, workers' compensation issues and achieving harmonious labour relations; and to ensure compliance with minimum standards under labour standards and pension legislation. Improving the legislative framework and modernizing our business practices will be the major emphasis in the 2009-10 business year.

2) Policy, Planning and Professional Services Branch:

The two divisions of the Policy, Planning and Professional Services Branch focus on supplying policy and decision support services to the department, as well as providing the business services to support our leased premises and service outlets. Records retention and information and privacy services come under this business area.

3) Safety Branch:

The three divisions of the Safety Branch focus on the protection of people and property. The main focus is on the licensing and control of gaming activities, liquor establishments and amusements; the safety of equipment and buildings; fire safety; and safety at work.

4) Skills and Learning Branch:

The four divisions of the Skills and Learning Branch work collaboratively with a range of government, industry, labour, business, community, and education partners to design, implement, and evaluate policies, programs, and services that support attachment to the labour market and learning and skill development at home, at work, and in the community.

5. Human Resource Strategy

As noted above, “Labour and Workforce Development is a Preferred Employer” is one of the goals identified in the department’s 2009-2013 Strategic Plan. It is the department’s objective to develop, retain and attract talented and skilled workers further strengthening an inclusive, high-performing and engaged workforce. We want to establish a corporate environment where people want to come to work, where their contributions, creativity and innovation are valued and recognized.

The 4-year, broad strategic priorities for the department are noted above.

The department will begin in this fiscal year with the development and implementation of a robust Human Resources Plan to address these priorities. The Nova Scotia Public Service Commission’s employee survey ‘How’s Work going?’ will provide the department with the baseline data required to move forward with appropriate measures of success and analysis. The Human Resource Plan will include such components as:

- a formal and active orientation program for all new employees.
- a transparent and objective methodology, which ensures that the development and training needs of all employees are met.
- the transition of Healthy Workplaces, Employee Rewards and Recognition, and Diversity Management Initiatives that were previously established with the Department of Nova Scotia Environment and Labour. Labour and Workforce Development will work with Nova Scotia Environment to ensure smooth transition of separate programs.

a) Healthy Workplaces

The Healthy Workplaces Initiative (HWI) will continue to support and integrate corporate HWI policy, programs and activities with the underlying goals of providing departmental health and wellness programming that will contribute to a supportive workplace. The objectives of the department include: review and evaluation of wellness initiatives, and encouraging the support and management of work/life balance issues.

b) Employee Rewards and Recognition

Through the Rewards and Recognition Initiative, the department seeks to provide effective programs and tools to recognize and value staff’s contributions to departmental operations and to ultimately maximize employee engagement and organizational excellence. The goals of the initiative are to provide a variety of formal and informal recognition opportunities and implement initiatives that ensure employees receive informal recognition of good performance and formal recognition of outstanding achievement.

c) Diversity Initiative

The Diversity Initiative focus is on assessing the diversity climate of the department, developing and implementing a strategy to meet department and corporate diversity objectives and identifying ways to measure progress so that we become a diverse workforce that truly represents the public that we serve. The goals are to increase visibility and promotion of a diverse workplace, provide awareness training and development opportunities, encourage employee participation in diversity initiatives, and develop partnerships and collaboration that advance the creation of an inclusive, diverse culture.

Canada and Nova Scotia signed two agreements in June 2008: the Labour Market Development Agreement and the Labour Market Agreement. The Labour Market Development Agreement transfers responsibility for the design and delivery of programming, provided under Part II of Canada's Employment Insurance Act, from Canada to the Province, effective July 1, 2009. A human resources priority this year will be the successful transfer of federal government employees under this agreement and the recruitment of a number of additional employees to ensure a smooth transfer of this program.

French Language Services

The Department of Labour and Workforce Development has been carrying forward the momentum generated, and the progress achieved, by its predecessors in the delivery and implementation of French-language services in prior years. The department is committed to building on existing capacity to provide services in the French language to meet the needs of the Acadian and francophone community.

The department, in collaboration with the Office of Acadian Affairs, will implement a French-language Services Plan to enhance the department's capacity to deliver French-language services to its clients. Priorities for 2009-2010 include: increasing employee awareness of the provincial government's commitment to provide French-language services, promoting interest and involvement in service delivery, exploring opportunities to address French language community needs, and continuing to build departmental capacity to provide service in French through employee training in the French language.

7. Information Technology and Communications

Labour and Workforce Development recognize the need to provide staff with the information tools they need to effectively manage their work.

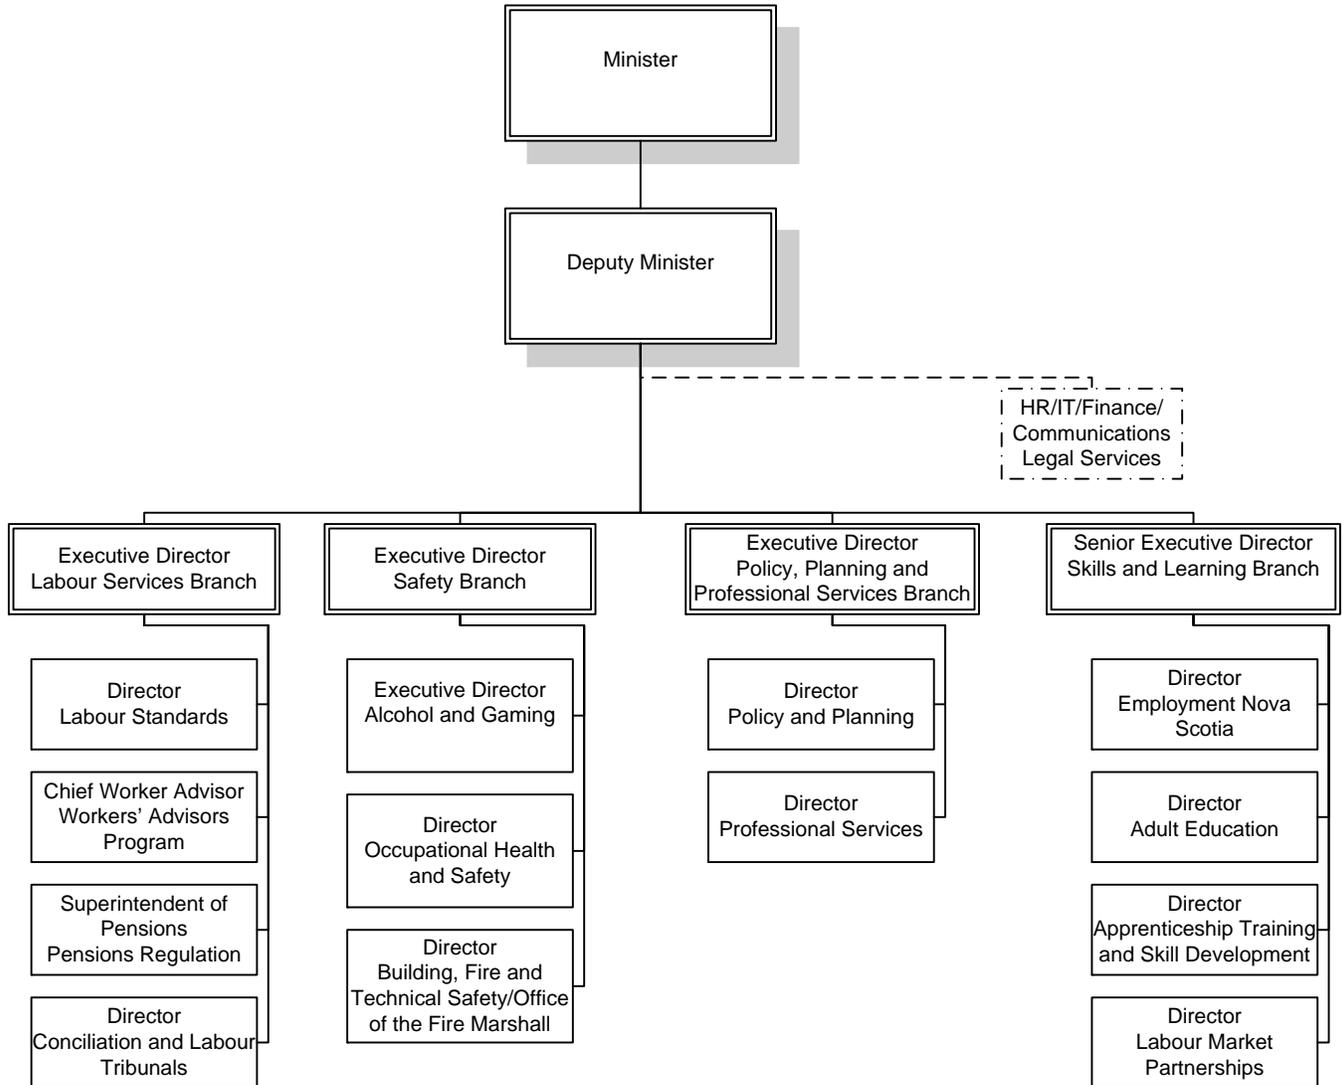

The department has implemented the Activity Tracking System in the Occupational Health and Safety Division, and is expanding that to the Alcohol and Gaming and Technical Safety Areas. The department is working through its Web Committee to make more information available on line, and to ensure our communications are clear and timely. There has been a concerted communications effort during our Strategic Planning process to ensure our staff, stakeholders and partners were fully engaged, and annual updates will occur on the Plan as we move forward over the next 4 years.

The department continues its commitment to being proactive with its communications objective to keep Nova Scotians well informed of its many programs and services.

To respond to the needs and priorities of the programs and operations within the department, the following IT priorities have been identified for 2009/2010:

1. Maintain and improve where practical on the current delivery of IT infrastructure services. This would include HelpDesk and Desktop services that are provided at Head Office, metro and especially in regional locations across the Province.
2. Develop an IT Technology Strategy that would identify all the high-level functional requirements of the department where IT solutions need to be applied; would assess our current uses of systems and technologies; would assess solution options and recommend a suite of technology solutions for use in LWD; and provide a prioritized list of implementation projects.
3. Provide the necessary IT supports and technologies to enable a smooth transfer of the Labour Market Development Agreement (LMDA) programs and services to Nova Scotia. LWD assumes responsibility for these programs from the federal government on July 1, 2009.
4. Continue with the implementation of the Labour Market Programs Support System (LaMPSS). This is a significant project for the Province, and includes requirements definition, design, development and implementation of new processes and IT components to support the ongoing delivery of Labour Market programs across LWD, Immigration and Community Services.
