Message from the Minister and Deputy Minister

We are pleased to present the 2012–2013 Statement of Mandate for the Department of Labour and Advanced Education. Our department, with its broad range of focuses that includes occupational health and safety, essential workplace skills development, labour relations and labour standards, private sector pensions, public safety, immigration, colleges and universities, and the status of women, faces an extraordinary year ahead.

Nova Scotia is entering a period of prosperity unlike anything we have seen in recent memory. The Irving shipbuilding contract, Shell's investment in our offshore energy reserves, the Muskrat Falls hydro-electric project, to name but a few...

Labour and Advanced Education's role will be to continue working with employers, unions and workers across this province to develop and maintain a workforce that is ready for those – and other – opportunities.

For the next 12 months, the women and men of the Department of Labour and Advanced Education will continue to make advances toward our shared vision of a fair, safe and prosperous Nova Scotia where all of us live, learn and work to our highest potential.

We will accomplish those goals by making post-secondary education more affordable for Nova Scotian families. We will continue our Workplace Education Initiative and Workplace Innovation and Productivity Skills Incentive to ensure that Nova Scotian workers have opportunities to learn and improve key skills needed in today's workplaces.

Government, employers and employees will embrace the Internal Responsibility System that says all of us have a role to play in making workplaces safer and healthier. With partners such as Workers' Compensation Board and Safety Services Nova Scotia, we will continue our efforts to build a culture of safety in this province.

This year, the 20th anniversary of the Westray Mine Disaster and the 30th anniversary of the sinking of the Ocean Ranger, will remind all of us of a greater need for vigilance in the workplace.

With an aging and shrinking workforce, we will continue our plans to attract educated and skilled workers from around the world to share in our prosperity, and open the doors to Welcoming Workplaces to greet them in their new home.

In May, Nova Scotia's Advisory Council for the Status of Women will host their national counterparts days before the Coalition of Women in Engineering, Science, Trades and Technology Conference. This national conference is an opportunity for more than 300 attendees from industry, academia, unions, and sector councils explore ways to achieve greater participation for women in technical and non-traditional careers and occupations that support women's economic security.

We encourage readers to learn more about our department by visiting www.gov.ns.ca/lae/.

Department Mandate

The Nova Scotia Department of Labour and Advanced Education works to develop a competitive workforce by making strategic investments in people, programs, services and partnerships. Our mandate is to provide a fair, equitable, safe, productive and inclusive environment in which to learn, work and live.

The broad mandate of the department includes:

- Regulatory responsibility for occupational health and safety, building, fire and technical safety, pensions, workers' advisers program, labour relations, and labour standards.
- Improving access among Nova Scotians to labour market information, employment services and learning programs that support their labour market attachment and growth. Strategic action is taken to help all Nova Scotians prepare for, find and keep employment and to meet the needs of Nova Scotia's labour market.
- Providing opportunities for individuals to advance at home, in the community or in the workplace through adult learning, literacy and essential skills, apprenticeship and skills development programs.
- Developing a supportive environment for volunteers and developing non-profit and voluntary sector capacity.
- Providing funding, services, and support to post-secondary institutions to maintain access to high quality post-secondary education and information.
- Attracting, integrating and retaining immigrants.
- Bringing to the Minister's attention matters related to women to improve the status of women in Nova Scotia.

Department Mission

To improve the social and economic well-being of Nova Scotians through education, improved working conditions, and services that help them live, work and learn.

To promote equitable and affordable access to quality higher education and knowledge for Nova Scotians, in partnership with universities, colleges, federal funders and service delivery providers.

To take a lead role in engaging and working with partners to attract, integrate and retain immigrants, recognizing the important contributions they make to our social, economic and cultural fabric.

To advance equality, fairness and dignity for all women in Nova Scotia.

Department Vision

Fairness, safety and prosperity for all Nova Scotians by living, learning and working to their highest potential.

Government Priorities

The Department of Labour and Advanced Education supports the government's three core priorities, which are to:

Get back to balance and ensure government lives within its means

- Labour market programs support system (LaMPSS). The Department's of Labour and Advanced Education, and Community Services are working together on the continued design and implementation of LaMPSS. LaMPSS is a common system and set of business practices focusing on the administration of labour market programs and services.
- Modernize legislation. A new Labour Board was proclaimed in February 2011, replacing six previously separate tribunals, and first contract legislation came into effect in January 2012. The innovations introduced by the new legislation will help ensure stability and fairness in our workplaces, and help government get back to balance.
- Federal / provincial / territorial Forum on the Status of Women. Minister More co-chairs the federal / provincial / territorial Ministers Forum on the Status of Women.

- Campaign school for women. The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women hosts a campaign school for women to encourage their participation in political leadership and engagement in government policy and decision-making.

Make health care better for you and your family

- Occupational health and safety. The department will partner with the Workers' Compensation Board (WCB) to develop a new workplace safety strategy for the next five years. The department and WCB will collect opinions from stakeholder groups to identify the most important areas to help improve workplace health and safety. The strategy is expected to be rolled out by the end of 2012.
- Technical safety. The department has developed a new Technical Safety Act, streamlining five pieces of safety legislation into one Act with five sets of regulations. This will make it easier to conduct business in Nova Scotia while ensuring that the safety of workers is maintained.
- Fire safety. The department is implementing all 25 recommendations from the Spring 2011 Auditor General's report that called for greater provincial oversight of fire safety services.
- Adult learning program / LINK continuing care assistant program. This program provides adult learners with the essential skills they need at home and at work. LINK provides an opportunity for people to earn their high school diploma and prepares them for jobs in one of the province's fastest growing employment sectors.
- Domestic Violence Action Plan. The Domestic Violence Action Plan was released in December 2010, involving 16 government departments and agencies, as well as community organizations. In 2011, Status of Women was appointed co-chair with the Department of Justice. This includes leading community-government meetings, hosting the provincial crime prevention symposium with domestic violence as the theme, and maintaining the government's www.nsdomeesticviolence.ca website.
- Human trafficking. The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women currently co-chairs the provincial committee on human trafficking to raise awareness about human trafficking and coordinate potential support for victims.
- Immigrant women. The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women administers an online guide to provide accessible information to immigrant and newcomer women about settling in Nova Scotia. The website is: <http://women.gov.ns.ca/immigrant-women.html>.

- Invisible barriers: refugee women’s health forum. This forum develops government-community partnerships and raises awareness about the need for improved access to health services for refugee women.
- Gender-based analysis tool. The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women is developing a tool to help government departments and agencies analyze the differentiating impact of policies and programs on women and men in the province.
- One Journey continuing care programs. This program helps to fill skills shortages with unemployed Nova Scotians. Over the last five years, over 400 continuing care assistants have been trained and hired, mostly in rural areas.

Create good jobs and grow the economy

- Productivity Investment Program. The Departments of Labour and Advanced Education, and Economic and Rural Development and Tourism are partnering to deliver this program to encourage businesses to become more productive, innovative and globally competitive.
- Workforce innovation and productivity skills incentive. Under this program, Labour and Advanced Education will promote an increase in Nova Scotia business and employer productivity through innovation, new training, new technical expertise and support.
- Workplace education. The province will work with industry to provide essential skills training and HR support programs.
- HR essentials. The province will further grow the supports to small and medium sized enterprises through the HR Essentials program. This program provides the supports to effectively recruit and retain a skilled workforce.
- One Journey. Labour and Advanced Education partners with the Department of Community Services and industry on this labour market attachment model. This program provides opportunities for skills development and direct employment to Income Assistance recipients and the un / underemployed by responding to an industry identified skills shortage.
- One Journey at work. Labour and Advanced Education partners with pre-approved organizations and workers to improve business operations through up-skilling the workforce with training that leads to certification and advanced qualifications.
- Canadian Coalition of Women in Engineering, Science, Trades and Technology (CCWESTT). The Minister will host her federal / provincial / territorial Status of Women counterparts in May 2012 for the CCWESTT policy forum to discuss the engagement of women in technical and non-traditional careers and occupations. Nova Scotia also co-chairs the senior officials' forum.

- Labour market information (LMI) strategy. The province is leading the development and implementation of an improved provincial LMI strategy to collect and share information that will help Nova Scotians to make better career, education and employment-related decisions. As a result, we should be able to better match labour supply with demand.
- Apprenticeship training. The province will work with industry partners to ensure today's apprenticeship training keeps pace with evolving technology, and that apprentices get the on-the-job training they need to meet the most current industry certification standards. In 2012-2013, the department will focus on completing an apprenticeship system review and developing a strategic plan for apprenticeship.
- Sector councils. The sector council program supports an industry-led approach to human resource development through funding / agreements with sector councils and like organizations.
- Transition programs for displaced workers. These programs support displaced workers through needs assessments, access to relevant labour market information, and customized essential skills programs.
- Targeted initiative for older workers. Labour and Advanced Education supports unemployed workers between the ages of 55 and 64 in communities affected by significant downsizing or closures.
- Business competency endorsement for journeypersons. Nova Scotia, in partnership with the other Atlantic provinces, is developing a business competency endorsement for journeypersons to provide a pathway and recognition for journeypersons seeking to move into business and entrepreneurial positions.
- HR support for small and medium sized enterprises. Labour and Advanced Education will support human resource planning and training to encourage recruitment and retention among small and medium sized enterprises that may lack human resource departments / capacity. A 'Welcoming Workplace' pilot is underway, as is a free online toolkit that aligns with the Department of Economic and Rural Development and Tourism's business portal, and Service Nova Scotia and Municipal Relations' Access to Business (A2B) program.
- Increased labour participation of under-represented groups. The Welcoming Workplaces program, which is currently under development, will support this objective by informing employers about the benefits of hiring diverse workers and support them in building welcoming and inclusive workplaces.

- careers.novascotia.ca. The department recently launched a new website that brings together all government resources and website to access skills, learning and training opportunities. This will make it easier for Nova Scotians to discover ways to attach to the workforce. It includes career development information, labour market intelligence and other resources to help Nova Scotians prepare for future employment.
- Worker recruitment and protection. The Worker Recruitment and Protection Act was passed in 2011 to prohibit charging workers (both foreign and non-foreign workers) recruitment fees, and prohibit recovering recruitment costs from workers. The Act has been partially proclaimed, and regulations are currently being developed.
- Nova Scotia School for Adult Learning (NSSAL). The department continues to support ongoing learning and skills development through NSSAL. The government is investing an additional $1 million in the program through jobsHere, with the goal of reaching an additional 500 learners in the next three years. The department recently developed the Adult Learning Act to formalize NSSAL's role, reaffirm the government's commitment to adult learning, increase governance and accountability, and to help raise awareness of the importance of literacy and essential skills. Regulations are currently being drafted with input from stakeholders.
- Family literacy. The department administers 19 family literacy programs across the province to help parents model the importance of education to their children.
- Universities and colleges. Nova Scotia and the Council of Nova Scotia University Presidents agreed to the three-year Excellence through Partnership Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) in 2011. The MOU promotes excellence in teaching and research, and establishes a direction to achieve a system-wide cost structure that is sustainable relative to the province's fiscal capacities and consistent with a fair and competitive tuition revenue regime.
- Private career colleges. The department is reviewing the Private Career Colleges Regulation Act. Through this review, the department aims to develop a clearer legislative authority to consider the labour market and new standards when approving and reviewing individual programs.
- Science, trades and technology. The department, in partnership with Women for Economic Equality Society, the Hypatia Association, the Nova Scotia Community College (NSCC) and other government departments uses a women-centred spectrum of supports to provide young and re-entry women with the opportunity to pursue science, trades and technology careers at four NSCC locations including Bridgewater, HRM (Institute of Technology and Akerley) and Cape Breton (Marconi Campus).

- Bread and Roses. The Nova Scotia Advisory Council on the Status of Women provides the Bread and Roses bursaries to women students in NSCC's science, trades and technology programs to encourage women's participation in technical and non-traditional careers and occupations.
- Employability tables. The province will work with the four existing employability tables, one each for Aboriginal communities, African Nova Scotians, Persons with Disabilities and Acadian Nova Scotians to develop strategic plans for increasing the participation of under-represented groups in the workforce.
- Settlement and employment services. The department will work with non-government partners to provide immigrants with settlement and employment services, both before and after they arrive in Nova Scotia. This will better prepare immigrants to integrate both professionally and in the community.
- Recognition of prior learning and credentials. The department will support the assessment and recognition of informal and formal learning. It will work to improve pathways to licensure for internationally trained workers coming to Nova Scotia by implementing the Fair Registration Practices Act, supporting provincial projects, and collaborating nationally on the pan-Canadian framework.
- Labour mobility. Labour and Advanced Education will work with other government departments and provincial regulatory authorities to promote labour mobility and ensure compliance with Chapter 7 of the Agreement on Internal Trade.
