Letter from the Commissioner

These are the results from the 2022 How's Work Going? Employee Engagement Survey.

Distributed to all civil service employees, these surveys have generally been completed bi-annually since 2005. They are designed to help capture how employees view their workplace, their employment experience, and identify areas for improvement.

An engagement score of 60 or above indicates an engaged workforce. In this survey, the results revealed that engagement has slightly declined from 62% in the 2019 survey, to 61%. The world, and the workplace, have significantly changed since the last engagement survey was conducted; our results reflect those changes. To address this, we added new elements to this year's report, which include:

- A Workplace Wellness Index, which is an indicator of overall workplace health. We plan to keep reporting this index in future surveys.
- "In focus" areas which highlight popular topics and trends in all workplaces. This year, we are providing insights on Flexible Work Arrangements and Retention and Staffing. These "in focus" areas may vary from year to year.

Using the corporate and departmental reports, Deputy Ministers will review findings with their senior leadership teams to determine action plans.

Thank you for participating in the 2022 How's Work Going? survey. If you have any specific questions about the process or these results, please connect with your department's leadership or the HR representatives that support your department.

About the Survey

How's Work Going? is the Nova Scotia Government's biennial employee survey that gathers feedback on various elements of the work environment that are important to employees. The survey design and measures are based on Nova Scotia's Employee Experience Model, which is connected to the Canadian Interjurisdictional Engagement Model. The Canadian Interjurisdictional Engagement Model has been developed by the Canadian Interjurisdictional Engagement and Analytics Team (IEAT). Nova Scotia is a member of the team, participating in the sharing structure and contributing results to Canadian benchmarking of the Engagement Index.

The results of the survey help inform leaders as well as program and policy development on what matters most to employees and what areas of the work environment may need attention. The workplace indicators, including the Employee Engagement Index can also be used to compare results from one survey year to another and to compare with other Canadian Jurisdictions.

Data Collection and Protection

The HR Analytics team at the Public Service Commission is responsible for conducting and analyzing the How's Work Going? survey. All information collected by the survey is strictly confidential and secure. In addition, this team follows strict privacy standards to protect the identity of survey participants. The survey responses, including individual perceptions and demographic information, are used only for the disclosed purpose for which it was collected - for statistical analysis and summary reporting to leaders and employees, as well as informing government programs and policies.

How's Work Going? responses are anonymous. As such, they are not linked to any individual or personal identifying information. Below is an outline of some of the steps and standards followed by the HR Analytics Team to protect all information collected:

1. Only summary information is shared. No individual responses or possible identifying information will be shared. Managers/Supervisors and leaders will only receive summary information.
2. Minimum reporting requirements are in place to protect the confidentiality of responses. Only groups with ten or more survey responses will receive a summary report, in which the results will be aggregated. In addition, a minimum response rate for groups must also be achieved:
 - Groups of 50 or less employees must have a response rate of 50%
 - Groups of 51-99 employees must have a response rate of 40%
 - Groups of 100 or more employees must have a response rate of 30%

Before release, all reports are thoroughly reviewed by the HR Analytics Team to ensure there are no risks to employee confidentiality.

3. How's Work Going? does collect verbatim comments. The survey reminds employees not to provide personal information or possible identifying information in their feedback. However, to ensure the confidentiality of verbatim comments reports, a report is only prepared and released to groups with a minimum of 50 respondents. Additionally, verbatim comment reports are only provided to senior leadership within a department, usually the Deputy Minister. All comments are reviewed, and any potentially identifying information is removed before the reports are released.

4. Access to the information collected is controlled. For example, only five employees of the HR Analytics team have access to the survey data for the purposes of analysis and reporting.

5. A full Privacy Impact Assessment has also been completed on How's Work Going? to protect your information.

New in 2022

Model Updates

Since the last How's Work Going? survey, the HR Analytics team has reviewed the Model and updates have been made to reflect the current trends, changes in the work environment, and design standards.

As a result, the 2022 How's Work Going? survey features many new and updated questions, ensuring our measures are reflective of our current work environments and terminology, and are shadowing new and emerging survey practices, including how results are analyzed and reported.

In addition, this review and subsequent changes provided the opportunity to expand the survey to focus questions on areas identified as being critically important in our workplaces at the time of the survey.

The Lighthouse

The Lighthouse remains Nova Scotia's graphical representation of our Employee Experience Model, however, the image has been refreshed to reflect the changes to our Model and survey questions.

New to 2022 reports, not all questions on the survey will be represented in the Lighthouse. Only questions that are most important to employees and their work environments are represented. These questions will remain consistent in future surveys so that work units can feel confident in comparing one survey year's results to another. Results for all survey questions are available and can be found at the end of this report.

Workplace Wellness Index

In addition to the updated Lighthouse Model, a new Workplace Wellness Index is included in the 2022 reports. Nova Scotia's Workplace Wellness Index is comprised of 11 questions that together provide a new overall assessment of work-related wellness in our workplaces.

Work Experience Indices, such as the Workplace Wellness Index, are becoming common in survey reports and often expand to include other important indices, such as Job, Career and Leadership.

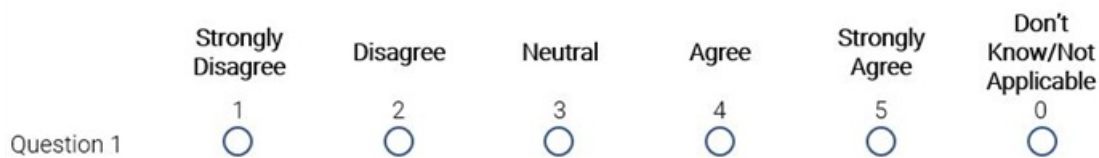

In Focus Sections

Finally, the 2022 survey results will provide results for two new 'In Focus' areas. Through the survey design consultation process, the following areas were identified as key focus areas for many workplaces in 2022: Flexible Working Arrangements, and Recruitment and Retention. These focus areas align with current thought leadership in the area of human resources. As a result, additional questions were added to the 2022 How's Work Going? survey to assess these key areas.

All of these updates to Nova Scotia's How's Work Going? survey have been undertaken to provide additional layers of analysis of the survey data with the intention of giving clarity and consistency in survey results.

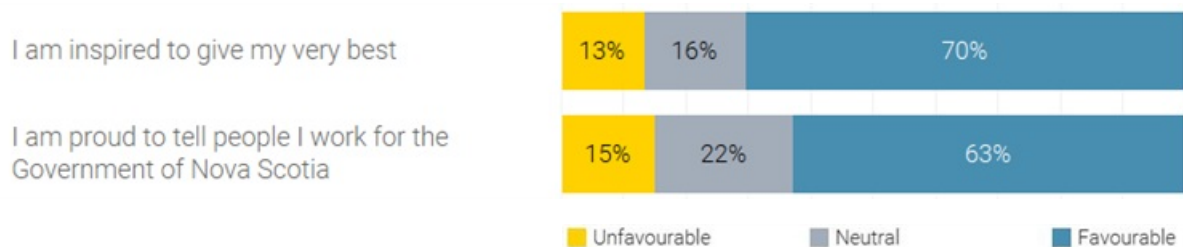

Reading this Report

Most questions asked on the How's Work Going? survey use the standard survey practice of asking respondents to select their satisfaction with statements on a 5-point Likert Scale. Below is an example of the response scale used on the How's Work Going?

For reporting ease, the above scale is converted into a 3-point scale, combining any responses above neutral as Favourable and any below neutral as Unfavourable. Don't Know/Not Applicable responses are omitted from the analysis for this report.

This report presents the results of these Likert questions in two ways: a series of stacked horizontal bar charts on pages 16 to 21 and a more accessible table format in the Appendix. An example of the stacked horizontal bar chart is presented below.

The Lighthouse only represents the favourable scores. See Nova Scotia's Employee Experience Model on page 14 for more information about the Lighthouse.

A few survey questions required a simple Yes or No response and will be reported as such. In addition, some questions gave respondents the option to select more than one response option, those questions will be identified throughout the report.

Except for personal demographic questions, all survey questions were mandatory, meaning employees were required to respond to a question before they could continue to the next question.

Previous How's Work Going? reports presented only favourable scores whereas, this year, we are presenting the results for the 3-point scale including Favourable, Neutral and Unfavourable results. This aligns with other recent survey reports, including Back to Better, which was conducted in 2020. Presenting the results this way provides a complete picture of employee satisfaction, showing how employee responses are spread across the entire answer scale.

Percentages featured throughout this report have been rounded to the nearest whole percentage. Due to this rounding, the sum of the percentages for a single question may not always total 100%.

As you review this report consider an Engagement Index as an overall measure of how a particular work group is functioning. This high-level indicator measures the seven questions focused on Job and Organization Satisfaction and Commitment to the Organization.

However, the Engagement Index cannot completely explain a particular work environment. Therefore, the introduction of the Workplace Wellness Index will complement the Engagement Index providing an additional explanation of one of the broad areas of the work environment that is critically important to a satisfied, committed and engaged organization.

Once the Engagement and Wellness indices have been reviewed, a further explanation of results can be found in the Lighthouse, reviewing each category's summary results. The final layer of explanation can be found by reviewing individual survey question results.

At a Glance

Survey Period

The survey was conducted in the fall of 2022, from November 15th to December 6th, 2022. The survey was primarily conducted online; however, paper surveys were sent to approximately 2,200 employees without regular access to a computer or smartphone. The survey was also available by request in French.

Survey Population and Response Rate

Participation was voluntary, yet highly encouraged by leadership across government. The survey was open to all civil service employees, including full-time, part-time, casual, seasonal, temporary, relief and contract employees.

While the survey was open to all employees, this report presents the findings for permanent, term, and contract employees. A separate report summarizing the results for casual, temporary, seasonal and relief employees will be provided if reporting guidelines are met.

The Response Rate for Public Prosecution Service is 43%.

Engagement and Workplace Wellness Index

The 2022 Engagement and Workplace Wellness Indices and the questions used to calculate these indices are presented below. Both indices are calculated by taking an average of the favourable scores of the underlying questions.

Employee engagement is comprised on 7 questions and is the extent to which employees feel connected to and involved with their jobs and their organization. An Engagement Index of 60 or above indicates an engaged workforce.

The Workplace Wellness Index comprises 11 questions that cover job suitability, recognition, team environment, flexible work arrangements, stress and workload, safety, mental health, respectful workplace and supervision. This new index will be used as a benchmark going forward to understand the workplace wellness of employees.

The Engagement Index for 2019 is also provided for comparison. However, given that the Workplace Wellness Index is new this year, no comparators are provided.

Nova Scotia’s Employee Experience Model

The How’s Work Going? survey is developed based on the Nova Scotia Experience Model. The model measures key elements in the work environment that have a significant impact on an employee’s work experience and engagement. The Nova Scotia model is based on the Canadian Interjurisdictional Engagement Model.

The Lighthouse represents the Model’s three main characteristics.

- Lens – The engagement index is located at the top of the Lighthouse.
- Structure – Key elements and drivers of employee engagement measured by the model are presented in the 'Body' or main structure of the Lighthouse.
- Foundation – Leadership is the foundation on which the model is built.

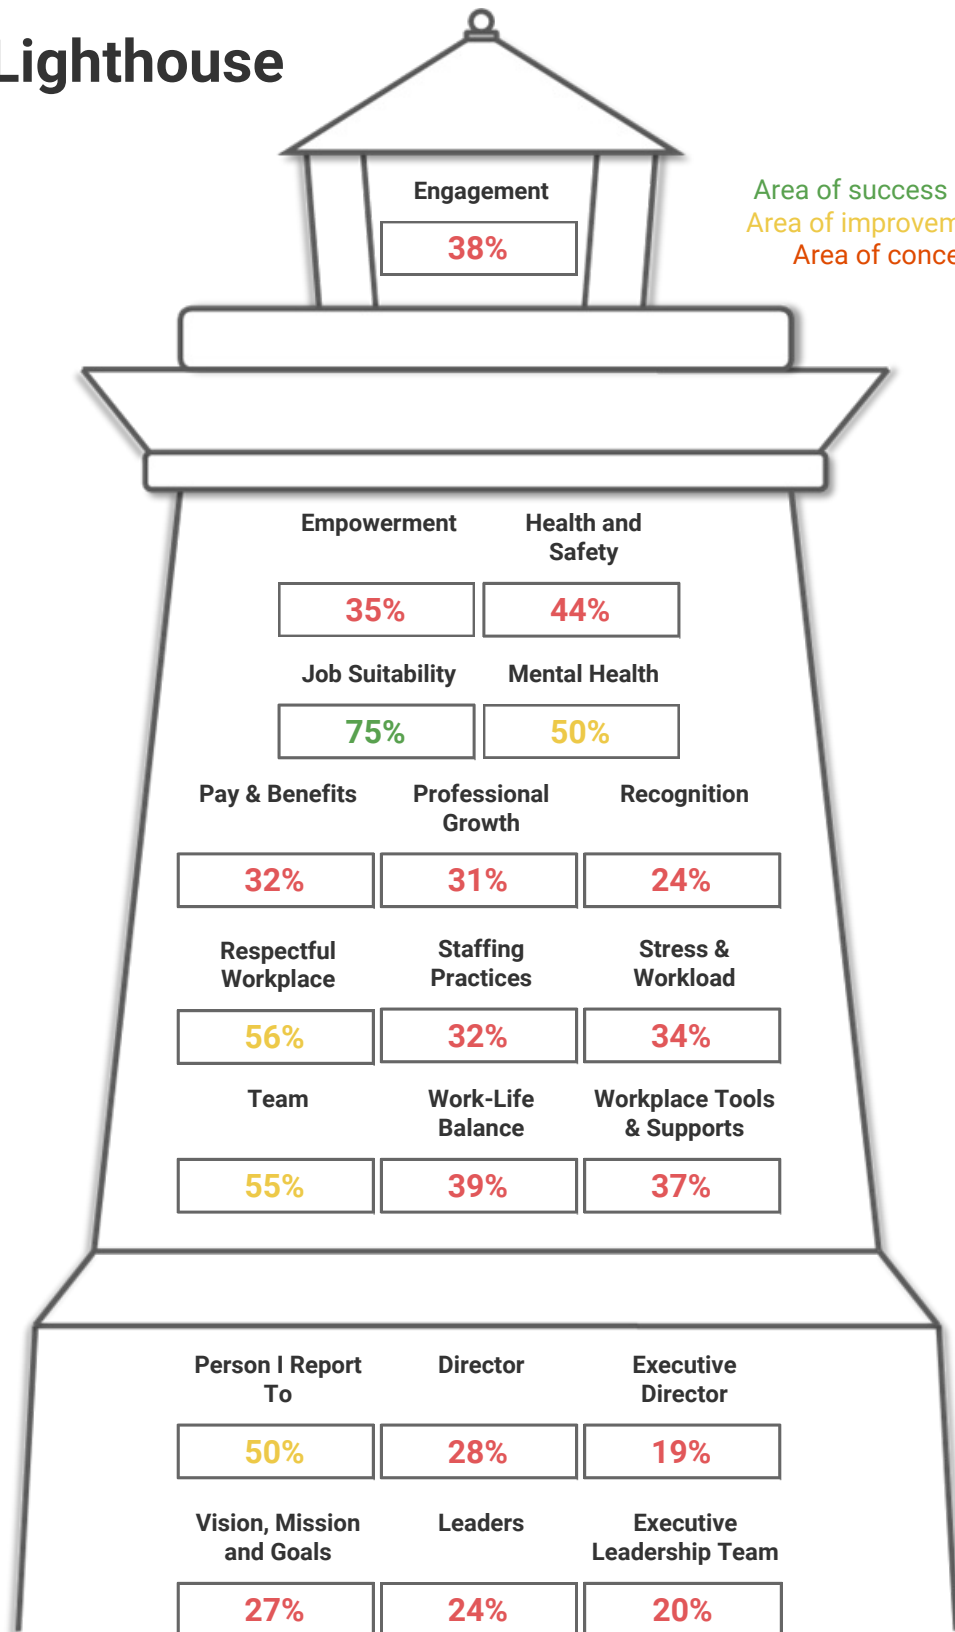

The drivers are colour coded to indicate overall satisfaction with the category.

Results in the Lighthouse are calculated by taking an average of the favourable scores to the questions included in each Lighthouse category.

The specific questions and responses making up the individual lighthouse categories are presented graphically on pages immediately following the Lighthouse. Additionally, the responses to all questions are found in the Appendix in a visually accessible table format.

In Focus: Flexible Work Arrangements

Many workplaces have adapted since the Covid-19 pandemic, and many employees are working more flexibly. As flexibility has become part of the everyday way of working for many employees, it is important to measure employee use and satisfaction with current flexible work arrangements.

Below are the results of the questions related to flexible work arrangements. Note that some of these questions were asked in the 2020 Back to Better survey and those results could be used for comparison for some departments.

Future Planning

The 2022 How's Work Going? survey asked employees to identify the one thing that they feel the Government of Nova Scotia and, separately, their department should focus on to improve the work environment. Below are the areas identified by employees as most important to them.

Considering the survey focus areas below, in your opinion, what one thing should your Department focus on to improve the work environment over the next two years?

Employees could only select one option to this question.

Discrimination and Harassment*

Respondents were asked to consider their experiences over the past 12 months when responding to the following questions regarding discrimination and harassment in the workplace. Each of these questions is a single response question; therefore, employees who chose to respond to these questions, could only select yes or no.

The Respectful Workplace Policy and Guidelines are a key resource if you have experienced or witnessed discrimination or harassment at work. The Guidelines provide greater detail on resolution options and set out other resources and supports that may assist with the impacts of witnessing or experiencing such conduct.

Please refer to the Respectful Workplace Policy or Respectful Workplace Policy Guidelines or contact Workplace Resolution.

Discrimination occurs when a person makes a distinction based on a protected characteristic under the Nova Scotia Human Rights Act, that imposes burdens, obligations or disadvantages not imposed upon others or which withholds or limits access to opportunities, benefits and advantages available to others. Racism is a specific form of discrimination based on race.*

Harassment is derogatory (e.g., condescending, insulting, belittling) or vexatious (e.g., aggressive, angry, antagonistic) conduct or comments that are offensive or unwelcome, and includes actions or comments that create an intimidating, demeaning or offensive work environment. Harassment may be a serious one-time incident but usually is a course of conduct or pattern of behaviour over time. Sexual harassment is a specific form of harassment based on gender/sex/sexuality.*
