

Fall Arrest Harness- 2:34 PM

Hey there. Me again.
I'm still hanging out down here, when I should be helping out above. Do you mind calling 1-800-9LABOUR
for me?

Workplace and public space safety issues can't report themselves. Our information specialists are here to answer your questions regarding workplace and public space safety issues, concerns, and regulations—and if you need to report an injury that has already occurred.

novascotia.ca/workplace-and-technical-safety

ABOUT 1-800-9LABOUR

We all have responsibilities in keeping our workplace safe. If you are unsure what to do when you see something unsafe, need to report an unsafe situation, or have questions about safety at a workplace or public space, 1-800-9LABOUR is here to help.

WHAT WE DO

Our information specialists are here to answer questions regarding workplace and public space safety issues, concerns, and regulations. The confidential information services line is available 7 days a week, 24 hours a day 365 days of the year and is key in helping ensure that Nova Scotians get the service and information they need to work safely.

For those calling about safety issues in their own workplace, be sure to follow your internal workplace safety protocols before calling 1-800-9LABOUR. This will likely include bringing the issue to the attention of your direct supervisor or safety committee.

IMPORTANT

Safety is everyone's responsibility; this includes taking the appropriate steps to report workplace and public space safety issues when they are not dealt with by those responsible. Make the right call by calling 1-800-9LABOUR when you see a workplace safety issue or have a question about safety regulations. All calls remain confidential.

